Translated for the Phil. Gazette.

INTERCEPTED LETTERS

From Pablo Morillo, commander in chief of the Spanish Army, to the Minister of State in Spain, dated Orono, March 2<sup>d</sup>, 1816.

Most Excellent Sir, in compliance with the commands of his majesty, I have ordered Brigadier Don Salvador Moxo, to establish without delay and with the utmost solemnity, the Tribunal of the Royal Audience, having for that purpose despatched an officer from this point with the necessary documents.

Under the impression that this step has been accomplished, and that I have complied with the orders of His Majesty; originating no doubt in a belief that the tranquility of Venezuela was secured, I request a few moments of His Majesty's attention to the representation of one of His Majesty's most faithful subjects, who has never been restrained by any other feeling, but a dread of His Majesty's displeasure, and who is desirous of communicating the experience which he has acquired in this turbulent and unsettled country.

When the expedition under my command arrived, all the inhabitants apparently recognized its authority and were grateful for the clemency of the King. But at the moment that I commenced the expedition against Carthage, hostile movements were observed in the plains, and the pass of Orono by Moragas and Celonco, was seized upon for the purpose of attacking the Capital. In Cumana insurrections took place and the Rebels obtained possession of Marturan and Gvra. But notwithstanding the army of His Majesty every where triumphed.

The Island of Margueta instigated by the Government of Carthage, with a view to divert the attack with which it was threatened, displayed the standard of rebellion, and immediately even at this moment it remains unsubdued. This event rendered it necessary to draw off the greater part of the troops which had been employed in dispersing the enemy in Guayana for the purpose of opposing those in Margueta, but in the mean time the Rebels in Guayana having increased, and then adopted a system of blockade against the Capital, which I fear will be productive of more evil unless that point can be relieved.

Your Excellency is well acquainted with the great extent of the Island of Margueta, Cumana, Barcelona, Guayana and the Plains, and I flatter myself that it will be considered as a subject of astonishment that so small a body of troops have been able to gain any advantage over an enemy decidedly superior in numbers, and who have little to fear from the inclemency of the climate, the mountainous nature of the Country and mode of living, all of which are so injurious to European troops.

There is little doubt but that the fate of the Kingdom of Santa Fe, will decide that of Venezuela (provided my troops are reinforced as I have requested) but at this moment the first is an even by no means accomplished nor can the second be expected for this some time, more particularly as the enemy is triumphant in Guayana and Margueta, and Bolivar with the expedition from the Caycos is ready to land war ever he may and partisans upon this exterior and defenceless coast. What then, let me ask you, will be the fate of Venezuela? We shall no doubt see the same scenes renewed which afflicted the country during the commotions of Monte Viedo and Cagigar, and we shall experience the misfortunes which his majesty by his private instructions appears so desirous to avoid, & that is to prevent by all possible means, the lustre and dignity of the royal audience being exposed to the painful necessity, as on former occasions, of seeking shelter among strangers.

By numerous advices which I have received, it appears that the provinces of Venezuela are in a complete state of insurrection, and that their inhabitants are committing outrages which are shocking to humanity. Our forces in that quarter are sick, and will not be able for any length of time to resist the attempts of the enemy.

An active police supplying the deficiency of force by enabling me to discover the plans and prevent the introduction of the disturbers of the public peace, into those points enjoying tranquility. For this purpose I have created a separate and special commission whose attention is wholly confined to objects of this nature. These objects could not be effected, if the form of royal audience were observed, more particularly as this chamber has so much to occupy its attention necessarily confining itself to affairs which no doubt require its immediate notice, but which are not especially connected with the command and tranquility of the country without which the ordinary course of justice is suspended, and the regular tribunals rendered less necessary.

I have taken various means in conformity with the authority granted to me by his majesty, the whole or in part contrary to the laws of the Indies but admissible in Spain, inasmuch as their being immediately under the eye of the sovereign they could receive his Royal sanction. For instance I have ordered public securities to be issued, and after having consulted the different corporations and assessors named those persons who should manage this concern, directing them to give an account thereof to his majesty for the purpose of receiving his approbation. With respect to the Ayuntamientos I have always conceived that they are clothed with a power which has enabled them in various ways to do much mischief either by issuing notes, or by communicating to the insurgents those plans of the government, which their situation made them acquainted with. They are composed of the Aborigines of the country, and not of its settlers & conquerors as was formerly the case.

All these steps have been censured and opposed by the Royal audience as unconstitutional, and although they are supported by the Captain General still there will be a division in the command and at least complaints will be made to the superior authority, if indeed it does not end in an open contention for power.

There are two views of the subject which strike me most forcibly at this moment. If the Rebels are wholly destroyed, the re-establishment of the Royal audience with its Judges selected from those who have not been concerned in the revolution, will be of the utmost importance, inasmuch as it will have many objects which will require its immediate attention. If the Revolution is maintained their ground, it is evident that an observance of the duty and regulations of that body will tend very much to embarrass any one who is not possessed with the ample powers with which his majesty has thought proper to clothe me, & which enables me, together with my having some time since requested in consequence of my injured health, leave to resign the captain generalship and the command of the army, to offer my observations to his majesty with less danger of being accused of sinister views than my successor would be.

Few persons are more convinced than I am, that a military government is the most despotic and destructive of the rights of man. It cannot be doubted but it is one which is universally adopted in all cases of insurrections. What government can restrain men in a country where everything is covered with blood, destruction and horror? What ties can operate on a population of rebels, who avail themselves of every opportunity of impeding our operations in a country from whence we must draw the means of subsistence for our troops, the expenses of the war which exists in the whole of these provinces. Can our supplies be obtained from any other source? When it is necessary to act with decision and rapidity, is it the time to deliberate? When Spain was invaded, what voice was heard? The error no doubt consists sir, on the part of those who are ignorant of the state of this country, listen to the tales of the emissaries of the rebels, who pretend that upon the appearance of the king's troops, all the inhabitants ran to meet them, and to bless the day of much happiness. Margueta, Cumana and Barcelona, give the answer to those who credit such reports.

In the present situation of the country, the rules and regulations required by the laws of the Indies are completely useless, more particularly in Venezuela. The Americans will not submit to the command of a stranger, particularly if he be an European, and less so if he is a Spaniard. He has submitted to at present only circumstances, and he obeys the king only until an opportunity of resistance offers.

Each province, most excellent sir, requires a distinct mode of treatment. The government which may suit Santa Fe, will not answer Venezuela, although they adjoin each other. In the first place there are few negroes or mulattoes, in the second scarcely any white remain. The inhabitant of Santa Fe has shewn himself cowardly and timid. The Venezuelan daring and sanguinary—but in dissimulation and perfidy they are alike. Perhaps this Vice royalty would not have made so obstinate a resistance if it had not have been for the Venezuelans. Carthage was defended to the utmost extremity by Venezuelans. To the right of Magdelon, they have fought various battles with troops organized, by Venezuelans. The mountainous and barren province of Antepuia has twice declared a war of extermination and they are now in possession of the passes fortified by Venezuelans. Santa Fe received its sanguinary ideas from the emissaries which were sent from Venezuela and in part all the evils with which this country is afflicted, is the work of Venezuela. On their own soil they are audacious, furious, and should they obtain good commanders, a great deal of blood must be spilt before they will be reduced.

When I arrived here with his Majesty's expedition, I was struck with horror, at the losses which each action whether gained or lost, cost us. I believed that this rancor, was the work of two parties, each desirous of revenging itself, and I conceived it to be the proper moment to exercise the clemency so much recommended by his Majesty. This goodness without a parallel is the only point in which strangers in their public papers have not dared to attack a nation, to whom they have attributed the character of being sanguinary. What sir, has been the result of new revolutions, new perfidies, and if the pacification of this Vice royalty has been accomplished, it submits only for the purpose of watching a more favorable opportunity of rising, in order to secure safety. New reinforcements, as I have repeatedly stated are necessary, together with an unity of power in the captain generalship, & even then I do not believe that the subjugation of the country is the work of a day, but view it as requiring much perseverance and constancy. The war is a struggle of blacks against whites.

Presenting to his majesty, this short picture of the state of Venezuela; I request that he may read with attention, what I have said on the occasion. I believe your excellency will be convinced, that this is not the moment to divide the supreme command, but that on the contrary, it will be necessary to give it a greater unity & durability, not only for the purpose of decision and despatch, but also to prevent those discords of which the rebels from Mexico to Peru, have with so much sagacity availed themselves; although I can with confidence boast, that there could not have been between two commanders of the different forces greater harmony, than has been enjoyed by this expedition; but this fortunate state of things cannot be always anticipated, so as to enable us to calculate the certainty upon an event of so much importance as the pacification of the Venezuela.

I believe it to be my duty to repeat that the supreme command should be placed in the hands of one person, & that his authority should be unlimited as without it, many delays and evils of the regular tribunals cannot return to the exercise of their ancient functions, until the pacification of all the provinces is completed, and that they ought at this moment to be considered as one vast field of battle, in which force is to decide the contest: & that the general may gain the action, either by his talents or good fortune without any person daring to act otherwise, than silently to obey and execute the commands of his chief: and that the rest of the powers which are quiet, should be considered as the deposit from whence the resources to gain the action must be drawn.

I do not, most excellent sir, wish to deceive his majesty. I am desirous that the rebels may be shortly subdued, and for this purpose I have taken the liberty of offering those ideas which my experience has given me, flattering myself that my resignation has placed me in a situation to do so, without being suspected of being influenced by personal feelings, and all my wishes are concentrated in the desire that my predictions may prove false.

God protect you for many years.

FROM LATE LONDON PAPERS.

LONDON, Feb. 11.

Mr. Hunt & the Magistrates.

A boy named Dogood, was lately committed by a Magistrate at Hat-ten garden, on a charge of being idle and disorderly, and having no visible means of subsistence. He had been seized by Read and Linbrick, police officers, just as he had torn down a placard about "Mr. Hunt hissed out Bristol." After remaining in prison 14 days, the poor lad was discharged, no one appearing to prosecute. His case excited the attention of Mr. Hunt of Bristol, who, with Mr. Cobbett, had an interview with the Hatton-garden Magistrates on Friday, when it appeared that the boy had visible means of getting his bread for he had upon him when seized certain religious tracts, which he had procured for sale, and of which these officers deprived him at the time. After some conversation, Messrs Hunt and Cobbett retired, declaring that they thought the Magistrate who committed the boy had done wrong, and that they would see to it.

It is a singular circumstance, that none of the Almanacks notice the now returning direction of the magnetic needle towards the North; in the year 1657 it pointed due North, but has been 160 years increasing in declination Westward; last year it attained a declension of 25, and then became stationary, and it is now receding back again to the North.

Among other strange mistakes made by the paragraphists about English and American names—we observe that a Paris paper mentions that one of the Massachusetts electors was an aboriginal named Long Feltz-Low.

Paris, Jan 27.
Count Gouvion St. Cyr is confidently mentioned as likely to succeed the Duc de Feltre.

At the funeral ceremony lately celebrated at St. Denis, M. de Talleyrand joined the great officers of the crown to take his seat among them as high Chamberlain. The Grand Maitres des Ceremonies, the Marquis of Breze, advanced and said, Prince, there is no seat reserved for you here. To this M. de Talleyrand replied, "You have then an order?" "I have." "It is useless for me to ask the nature of the order, but where am I to place myself?" Among the Peers, Prince, if you chuse, since you accompany the Deputation." M. de Talleyrand answered distinctly, "Je dedommage que vous m'offrez est plus que suffisant"—and immediately (though, if I am correctly informed, not without emotion) mingled in the ranks of his noble colleagues. The reason of the Marquis de Breze's interference is said to be grounded on the royal order, prohibiting the Prince de Benevento from appearing at court. A court is constituted by the presence of his Majesty, or the Princes of the family. A tribune has been reserved for the King. It is thus evident that M. de Talleyrand, taking his seat as high chamberlain, was violating the order, though in his quality of Peer of France he was strictly en regle.

Letters from Munich announce that Queen Hortensia [of Holland] is on the point of definitively quitting Constantine, in Switzerland, and establishing her residence at Dillingen, where she purchased a very delightful estate. It is added that M. de Lavalette is in the intention of rejoining his relations.

FRANKFORT, K. March 23.

The Kentucky river was higher on yesterday than it has been since the winter of 1803. The water was within four feet of the bridge, which has however maintained its position, with the exception of one of the braces, which alone has been forced by the impetuosity of the drift wood.

Extract of a letter from a gentleman (passenger) on board the Steam Boat Washington, (built at Wheeling) to a gentleman in this place, dated Natchez, March 3, 1817.

I left you at Shippingport on Monday the 3d inst. at half past twelve o'clock, and arrived here this evening after a passage of seven days and a half, eight o'clock at night of the same day. The wheel of the Steam Boat gave away, and was repaired at 12, of the same night—Tuesday the 4th, at night, some part of the machinery gave way, but was repaired in two hours. Thursday 6th at 7 o'clock in the morning, we ran on a large sand bar, in a thick fog and made considerable exertions to extricate the boat but without success. Friday 7th, at 7 in the morning, we resumed our exertions and got off without damage—on the 8th at 12 o'clock we ran over a sawyer, which deprived us of all our buckets from the wheel—repaired in 3 hours—on the 9th at 3 o'clock in the morning we ran on shore—got off at day light, you find from this hasty narrative deducting the time lost by disasters, a very extraordinary passage of about 14 days from Louisville to Natchez. On Wednesday next we hope to be in New Orleans, unless accidents should prevent, making then a passage of 8 days from Shippingport to that place.

QUEBEC, APRIL 3.
PLASTER OF PARIS.

The American Congress have passed an Act which goes into force, on the fourth of July next, prohibiting the importation of this article in foreign vessels, from any country or its dependencies of which it is the production, from which American vessels are not permitted, to bring the same. The act is to continue in force five years. Plaster of Paris abounds in several parts of the sea coast of the Bay of Fundy within the Provinces of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, and from thence the United States were accustomed to supply themselves with great quantities which they annually employ in agriculture and otherwise. The governments of these Provinces in order to benefit the inhabitants thereof, and promote the maritime interests of the British Empire, have enacted laws, which are now in force regulating the trade in this article. Those laws of course confined the trade to British Shipping, and are also to continue in force five years. By the law above mentioned, therefore, of the American Congress, the citizens of the United States are prevented from receiving any Plaster of Paris from the Bay of Fundy during that period, except what may reach them through smugglers.

Charleston, April 12.

We understand some papers of the brig that was lately lost on our bar was found some days since, on Long Island, and are now in the hands of the Spanish Consul. By them it appears, she was the Spanish brig Jupiter, Captain LLuvia, from Havana bound to Cadiz, with a cargo of Mahogany and Sugar, valued at about 25,000 dollars, and most, from circumstances, have been captured by some Revolutionary privateers.

Times.

A gentleman from New-Orleans, via Savannah, has favoured us with New-Orleans papers to the 14th ult. He also informs us, that Mr. Livingston, and the other proprietors, of the Balthore,* had submitted certain propositions to the City Council, calculated to conciliate the interests of the City, with the individual claims, to this important part of New Orleans. The propositions were published by the Corporation for the information of the citizens, and the general belief was that they would be accepted by the Council, and that this useful part of the city would be immediately improved. The Mississippi had begun to rise at New Orleans on the 6th of March and some small pieces of ice had been seen floating past the city, which had never before been observed, by the oldest inhabitant. The winter in the Western Country, had been very severe. The Ohio did not break up at the Falls before the 1st of March.

Owing to the severe winter above, and the consequent low state of the Mississippi, Flour and Western produce generally were very scarce, and high in price along the river. At Natchez, it sold for 15 dollars, but the shipment of Flour, Corn, & Tobacco from above, it was supposed would be very great this year.

The port was crowded with shipping—no less than two hundred square rigged vessels, and freights very dull and low. Cotton 1 cent per lb to Liverpool. Cotton at N. Orleans 28 cents.

* A considerable part of New-Orleans, formed by the alluvion of the Mississippi, from which Mr. Livingston was dispossessed some years ago, by order of Mr. Jefferson.

WESTERN TRADE.

A paper printed at Columbus Ohio, on the 5th inst, mentions that on the 5th inst, there had been built and were then building, in that vicinity, twenty one boats, for the purpose of conveying flour to New-Orleans; that much larger numbers were building at Delaware, Greenville, and Chillicothe, each to carry 300 barrels. Some of these were already received & in freight and were descending the river. Price of flour at Chillicothe, 80 per bushel. Corn 57 cents per bushel.

Many true federalists, have viewed the exertions of democracy, as contemplating present nothing more than the election of Oliver Wolcott, and believing him heartily attached to the good of his native state, have seen no reasons why particular exertions should be made to prevent his election. If these views were correct, we should scarcely blame their conduct; but it should have been understood that Mr. Wolcott is only the democratic stepping stone to power; that he is instrument not the object of their purposes.

RAN AWAY from the subscriber's farm near Alexandria, on the Saturday night preceding the Easter Holidays, a negro man, named Dick, who commonly calls himself RICHARD PARKER.—Dick formerly belonged to the estate of William Triplett, deceased; is very black, stoops a little in the shoulders, but is likely; has formerly worn ear-rings, and has rather a wild look out of his eyes when spoken to, about 5 feet 7 or 8 inches high, and is a smart, intelligent fellow. He went off well supplied with clothes of which he has a variety—a black velvet waistcoat, and a dark brown great coat with a large cape, are the only articles recollected—a good stock of money; and it is more than probable has been furnished with papers to represent him as a freeman, as his father & other relations in Alexandria are free people. Ran away from the subscriber living near Fairfax court house, on the 15th of January, a negro man named JESS—he is about 23 years of age, about 5 feet 11 inches high, dark complexion. He had on when he went away a dark cloth coat, domestic cloth pantaloons and various other clothing. Ten Dollars Reward.

RAN AWAY from the subscriber, on Sunday the 6th April, a black man, by the name of Julius, but calls himself HENRY, when from home; he has been hired in Alexandria since the first of January as a freeman—he is about 5 feet 6 inches high. Stutters or stammers very much when alarmed. I expect he will get employment at some of the fisheries or in a fish boat, or he may make or Baltimore or Philadelphia. Benedict Property for Sale.

Will be offered at public sale on the premises, on Monday the 5th May next, if fair, if not the first fair day thereafter—

All that very valuable Estate in Benedict, late the property of John Forbes, Esq. deceased, comprising the town, (with the exception of 3 lots) and 80 or 100 acres of Land attached thereto.

The many advantages this situation affords to mercantile men scarcely has a parallel, combined with an excellent navigation, and convenient store rooms and warehouses for the transaction of business—in a rich and extensive neighborhood, heretofore depending for supplies on that place.

In addition to that beautiful improved lot formerly the residence of Mr. Forbes, are several Dwelling houses in good repair, one which has been occupied for some time past as a tavern. The above property will be sold either by separate lots or the whole together as may suit purchasers. A long credit will be given by securing the payment of the purchase money. Sale to commence at 10 o'clock A. M.
